Abstract. In this story, one simple girl's character, her university life and one strange guy (who always helps behind her back) was described.

Key words: Girl, books, someone mysterious, university hostel.

She moved to another city due to her studies. Even though the people and their lifestyles were different from the people live in girl's town, she quiet liked this city. Notwithstanding it was the first time for her to live far from parents, she has got used to live the way of life. It's true that she couldn't find a friend who is kind and loyal also thinks the same with her, girl was pretty satisfied with her life. Since her relationship with God is so intimate. She was completely different from any other girls. Walking alone with books and not much communicating with people were her everyday habits. She was so falling love with books that when she read her books, she would fall into them with her entirely heart. And her mind was always busy thinking different kind of ideas and goals. Sometimes she was confused between two things-love and future , desiring the former coming also in her life. But the future always seemed more important than anything else. She used to spend her nights with tears without any reason.

One of the characteristic she has which makes different her from others is that even though she would spend the nights with hard thoughts, crying and suffering, she had the power to start over everything and begin her day with big ambitions.

The academic year was about ending. In retrospect, girl achieved some pretty good awards even they weren't big enough within the 2 years. When she faced any barrier, someone would help behind her back: everything would become easy for her and she got always a winner even if standing at the last line. Girl would sometimes think like it was just an accident, so she didn't care about this. Because there weren't any people here to help the girl.

The last day in the university. Girl couldn't prepare well for the final exam, cause her mind was swamped with sweet thoughts like going home and seeing her parents. As a result, she didn't set aside enough time for that, she was about failing until one thing happened. In the exam hall, girl was crying and begging to the Professor asking for another chance to do the test again. Despite all the efforts she did, nothing worked: he didn't alter his decision. But suddenly, someone called him and he went outside. After a few minutes he came right away and have 90 points out of 100 without saying any words and let her go. Girl was really shocked why this happened. But she didn't notice someone mysterious had helped her out surreptitiously.

2 June. Finally the day had been waited so long came. About five months passed when she saw last her parents. In the morning she woke up so early and prepared her things. She was ready to go home, so went to the airport a few hours before the plane took off. At that time everything was okay and girl was over the moon, since she was going home. One hours left to lift off the plane and she opened her handbag to check her passport. Omg! When she saw the inside there weren't her passport and her money. Then she reminded that while she was rushing to the airport she left her passport and money unconsciously on the table of her room.

She got out of a taxi and run swiftly to the hostel. As she arrived there, she really got blank seeing her around: there had been a theft in the University's hostel. All the entrances were closed and people had no access to enter the inside with the exception of militaries. People resembled like that herd to the girl, because there insane amount of them. Among the fears she was running and begging to every armed person asking for help and saying she would late to the plane. Despite the fact that she tried so hard to accede her things but worked out: no one replied her. Some policemen told her they wouldn't and others just gave a cold shoulder. There was only a half hour to fly. Girl was shedding tears to God asking for aid and she was frozen like dead without knowing what to do next. That moment all of a sudden, one policeman came to girl in rush carrying her things in his hand. And told her that someone came in a cloth same with him and got the girl's things out of the inside. And told him" Please, carry them to that girl as soon as possible. Then he lost immediately. She was completely aghast and she felt that God made something magical again, but this time that happened by whom - it didn't even come close to her mind. As she was running hard to the airport within thinking anything, the man who always had helper behind her back was changing his cloths inside his car...
